Dear Mr. Zuckerberg,

Access Now is a global organization fighting to defend and extend human rights in the digital age, particularly for users most at risk. We are writing to draw your attention to your company’s performance in the 2020 Ranking Digital Rights Corporate Accountability Index. As you may be aware, the Index evaluated 26 of the world’s leading digital platforms and telecommunications companies, including yours. Ranking Digital Rights (RDR) found that all companies could make significant improvements in disclosing policies and commitments that affect their users’ rights to freedom of expression and privacy.

Transparency on these issues not only supports human rights, but also helps ensure user trust. Investors also depend on disclosures to verify that companies are upholding their duty to respect human rights. Therefore, we invite you to offer a public response to the 2020 Index results.

Facebook ranked fifth out of the 14 companies in its category, and saw a 0.89% increase in its RDR Index score from 2019, when measured on comparable indicators. The company’s score was based on an evaluation of its disclosed policies for its services on Facebook, Instagram, WhatsApp, and Messenger. Facebook made some key improvements, notably improving its security policies by clarifying protocols for preventing unauthorized employee access to user data and committing to notify users in cases of data breaches.

However, there is still room for improvement. We encourage you and the relevant officers within your company to read through the full RDR Index findings and recommendations, and the “report card” for your company in particular, and develop a public response to the issues raised here. But we have narrowed our recommendation to one, timely, and achievable, objective based on our insights into the most acute issues facing at-risk users.

Recommendation:

Facebook should significantly improve its transparency on and accountability for its content moderation by publishing consistent data on actions it takes to enforce platform rules, including its ad content and targeting policies. Reports should be organized by country, type of restriction, and content type.
This is an opportunity to distinguish your company from others in the sector as a leader on these issues, and to demonstrate a commitment to your users to respect their rights.

The 2020 report card for Facebook can be found here: https://rankingdigitalrights.org/index2020/companies/Facebook.

We encourage you to send a response for publication by June 1, 2021, to demonstrate to your users and stakeholders that your company is serious about upholding freedom of expression and privacy. We also invite you to join us at RightsCon, the world’s leading summit on human rights in the digital age, from June 7-11, 2021. At RightsCon, you will have the opportunity to engage with a wide range of stakeholders from around the world.

We look forward to hearing from you and would be happy to speak with you about your results and provide feedback as you develop your response.

Sincerely,

Isedua Oribhabor
