

To: The Executive and Programme Committee and all Members of the 2017 International Conference of Data Protection and Privacy Commissioners in Hong Kong

We, the undersigned organizations, seek the ICDPPC's commitment to increasing the role for civil society at the annual conference, as well as to concrete steps to enhance transparency.

The ICDPPC represents a key space for policy development on the world's most urgent data protection and privacy issues. Diverse and representative viewpoints at this forum for data protection leaders is essential to both strong policy-making and meaningful debate on issues which impact increasing numbers of people around the world.

We believe that civil society has an essential role to play in representing the diversity of public interest views on privacy and data protection-related issues, including the voices of underrepresented stakeholder groups.

Building on the ICDPPC's years of experience, annual meetings and its intersessional work, the Conference provides important opportunities to deliver solutions to the international challenges faced by increased data generation, collection, storage, and transmission. The Madrid Privacy Declaration, adopted by over 100 civil society organizations and privacy experts from more than 40 countries in 2009, offers solutions to these international trends by reaffirming international instruments for privacy protection, identifying new challenges, and calling for concrete action.

We represent a global group of civil society organizations with expertise in internet and information and communication technology (ICT)-related issues who share a common belief that the ICDPPC has an important role to play in assisting all stakeholders to protect and respect fundamental rights, confront challenges, and harness opportunities.

To this end, we make the following recommendations to the ICDPPC and its members, to support greater transparency and participation:

- Include civil society in the Programme Committee: The ICDPPC should include a civil society member to its Programme Committee and therefore allow greater scope for participation of civil society in discussions.
- Include civil society in the sessions: The ICDPPC should also commit to including civil society representatives as speakers in the majority of both open and closed sessions of the main Conference.
- Enhance civil society participation and meaningful dialogue: The ICDPPC should commit to facilitating civil society participation at the Conference by removing, or at least, significantly reducing the high registration fee for NGOs.
- Increase online transparency on deliberations: The ICDPPC should make all documents publicly available on the ICDPPC website, with the exception of cases in which disclosure would cause potential harm to a legitimate private or public interest.

We look forward to working with the ICDPPC and to constructive dialogue going forward.
